Why most won't welcome Christ's second coming

Scripture records the manner of Christ's return in some detail. Yet, prophecy indicates that the vast majority will neither recognise Him nor accept Him. Indeed, many will actually take up arms against the Saviour of the world.

We are told that Christ's return will be visible to all. Indeed, "every eye shall see Him" (Revelation 1:7). Yet mankind in general will not welcome or accept Him, believing He may be an imposter.

Earth's armies, originally intent on destroying one another, will combine their resources to attempt to fight Christ, the "KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS," as He descends from heaven on a white horse (Revelation 19:11-16). Having gathered for warfare in the valley of Jezreel, at Armageddon (Hill of Megiddo), they will turn towards Jerusalem where they will meet Christ in battle (Revelation 16:12-16; 19:19). How could these warring nations have become so mistaken?

Deception prophesied

Shortly before His crucifixion and resurrection, Jesus Christ delivered a major prophecy of end-time events known as the "Olivet Prophecy." It is recorded in Matthew 24-25, Mark 13 and Luke 21. Jesus was asked by His disciples: "When will these things be? And what will be the sign of Your coming, and of the end of the age?" (Matthew 24:3).

He responded with a description of conditions and events that would lead up to His return, explaining that once these signs became evident, His return would occur within one generation (Matthew 24:34). Could today's world be that generation? If so, how do the attitudes and mindset of this present society, including those of professing Christians, compare with those described in the Olivet prophecy and the book of Revelation?

Christ's first warning concerned deception. He told His disciples: "Take heed that no one deceives you. For many will come in My name, saying, 'I am the Christ,' and will deceive many" (Matthew 24:4-5). Deception recurs as a theme throughout this and related prophecies. Verse 24 states, "For false christs and false prophets will rise and show great signs and wonders to deceive, if possible, even the elect." The elect are those who stay close to God.

This warning of deception parallels a white horse described in Revelation 6 depicting a rider who appears to come in the name of God bearing a message of peace. But this rider is a conqueror, one who imposes his version of peace on the world (verses 1-2).

Earth's inhabitants will have become so anti-God and anti-Christ that they will not willingly accept God's rule.

Some confuse him with Jesus Christ who is described later in this book, but a careful examination of the scriptures reveals important distinctions. At His return, Christ is wearing “many crowns”, not just a single one as worn by this first horseman. And instead of wielding a bow, Christ is brandishing a sword with which He strikes the nations (Revelation 19:11-16). To be consistent with Christ’s statements in Matthew 24, we must conclude that the first rider represents not Jesus, but false teachers who appropriate His name. (To learn more of the five horsemen described in Revelation, please request or download our brochure The Horsemen of Revelation.)

Christians not immune from deception

This end-time deception also ensnares those who claim to follow Christ but do not practise what He taught. For example Jesus compared a “faithful and wise servant” with an “evil servant” (Matthew 24:43-51). Clearly these two have the same Master. He poses a similar scenario in Matthew 7:21-23, where those professing to have done “many wonders” in His name are not recognised because they practised “lawlessness” – sinful behaviours (1 John 3:4).

The apostle Paul linked deception at the end of the age with a spirit of lawlessness and delusion that will be exhibited by all those who practise unrighteousness and who do not have a “love of the truth” (2 Thessalonians 2:9-12).

Three times in the book of Revelation those faithful to Christ are described as keeping God’s commandments (Revelation 12:17; 14:12; and 22:14). Given that God’s Word is truth (John 17:17) and “all Your commandments are truth” (Psalm 119:151), it is not surprising that so few have the aforementioned “love of the truth” (2 Thessalonians 2:10). Even many who profess to know God do not keep His commandments.

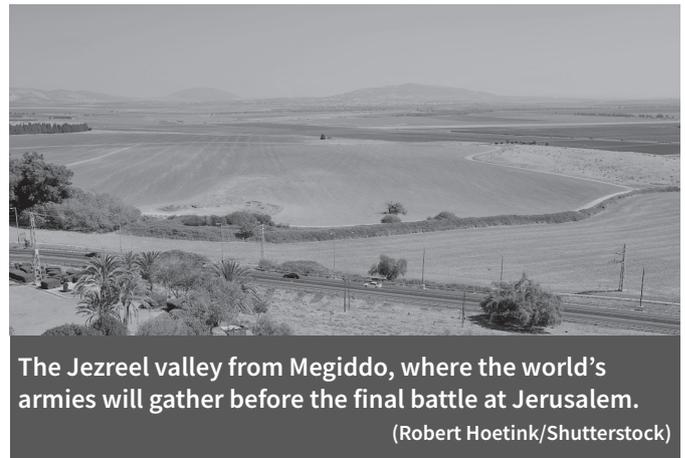

Minds set against God

Deception will greatly influence the mind-set of the end-time world. However, despite the extreme danger of total destruction, its populace will continue to exhibit attitudes that are totally set against God and His laws. The apostle Paul refers to this trait in his letter to the Romans, where he explains that human beings could have recognised God’s handiwork in the Creation, but chose not to, because “they did not like to retain God in their knowledge” (Romans 1:28). The following verses list some of the resulting attitudes and behaviours, including “haters of God, violent, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things” and “unloving, unforgiving, unmerciful” (verses 30-31).

In another letter Paul described similar attitudes prevalent at the end of the age: “But know this, that in the last days perilous times will come: For men will be lovers of themselves, lovers of money, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, unloving, unforgiving, slanderers, without self-control, brutal, despisers of good, traitors, headstrong, haughty, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God” (2 Timothy 3:1-4). End-time populations don’t see God as the solution to the world’s problems and won’t submit to Him.

Christ mentions this same mind-set in the parable of the minas recorded in Luke: “But his citizens hated him, and sent a delegation after him, saying, ‘We will not have this man [Christ] to reign over us’” (Luke 19:14).

Even when heavenly signs appear after many have died from war, disease and famine, and despite a call to repentance being preached to them, they will still refuse to heed, choosing instead to hold to their own ways. They will have become so anti-God and anti-Christ they will not willingly accept Their rule in their lives.

With deception, death and destruction rife in the world, still “the rest of mankind, who were not killed by these plagues, did not repent of the works of their hands, that they should not worship demons, and idols of gold, silver, brass, stone, and wood, which can neither see nor hear nor walk. And they did not repent of their murders or their sorceries or their sexual immorality or their thefts” (Revelation 9:20-21).

“Sorceries” is translated from the Greek word from which we derive terms like “pharmaceuticals”. The New King James Version has the margin reference “drugs.” This would include the use of hallucinogenic and related drugs to access the occult, engage in magic arts, or gain control over others. It is not referring to usual forms of prescribed medication, although even those can be abused.

Since these people “did not repent”, the inference is that they had been told they needed to do so.

Love grows cold in a world replete with sin

Jesus said: “And because lawlessness will abound, the love of many will grow cold” (Matthew 24:12). With nations (Greek ethnos suggesting different racial groupings) fighting against each other and kingdom battling kingdom, accompanied by famine, pestilence (disease epidemics) and devastating earthquakes the earth will be in chaos. It will have reached the point where, “If those days had not been cut short, no one would survive, but for the sake of the elect those days will be shortened” (Matthew 24:22, New International Version). Christ will arrive in time to rescue the earth.

New reign ushered in Christ gives us the solution to today’s stress-filled world and its deceitful, God-rejecting ways. He warns us to be ready at all times (Matthew 24:44). A parallel passage instructs us to take heed, avoid sinful practices and pray so we will be counted worthy to escape all the trauma on earth and to “stand before the Son of Man” (Luke 21:34-36). Drawing from the book of Revelation we can conclude that at all times we need to be in an obedient and repentant frame of mind.

As Jesus sets foot on the Mount of Olives, the site He left almost two thousand years ago, the mount will split in two (Acts 1:9, Zechariah 14:4-5). His enemies will be quickly vanquished (verses 12-13; Revelation 19:20-21). Christ will then be enthroned as “King over all the earth” (Zechariah 14:9; Revelation 20:4-6). Those with Him will have been “called and chosen and faithful” (Revelation 17:14). More importantly they will have recognised and welcomed their Saviour and King.

Checklist to recognise deception

Information is omnipresent in our society, but, sadly, so too is disinformation. The Bible shows us how to distinguish between the two.

It is so easy to believe information that isn’t correct. Experts say we shouldn’t eat this or that – it’s bad for us – then years later we find out this wasn’t true and we should have been eating whatever we were advised not to. Today discussion revolves around whether we should or shouldn’t wear masks when outside our homes.

Subjected as we are to a constant barrage of fake news it may sometimes seem impossible to distinguish between lies and truth. When world history is corrected after Christ’s return we might be surprised to learn what really happened. However, when it comes to biblical truth it should not be so. Is what we believe accurate? Is it true? Can we prove it?

The online Cambridge Dictionary defines “deceive” thus: To persuade someone that something false is true or to keep the truth hidden from someone for your own advantage.

An individual who wants to deceive has evil motivation to reach his or her goal or purpose. This is detrimental to others. Synonyms of deceit are dishonesty, hypocrisy, treachery. On the contrary, antonyms of deceit are honesty, sincerity, truth. So, what can we do to avoid falling in the trap of being deceived?

Others can deceive us

There are those who try to manipulate others for their own ends. Their speech can be full of flattery. So we need to be aware and wise enough not to fall for empty words (Ephesians 5:6). Truth is what matters.

Deception does not come just from a person we might be listening to, but also from what we might read, watch on TV or find on the Internet. We have to be careful with whom we associate virtually as well as literally, so as not to allow Satan to gain a foothold.

God instructs us to trust only Him, because He knows the state of the human heart. We should even be cautious of so-called experts. A wise approach is found in Acts 17:10-11. Here the people of Berea received the word of God. However, they did not stop there. They wanted to be sure that what they were being told was correct, so they checked the facts. Not with the mindset of wanting to disprove the apostle Paul, but to confirm, increase and strengthen their own knowledge. They did that daily, not once a week during the Sabbath. They had zeal and an eagerness to search for the truth. They ensured they understood correctly. If we do the same, we will become unshakable, immovable, well grounded in God’s Word. By doing so we develop a deeper relationship with our Creator.

Deceiving ourselves

On occasion, we can be our own worst enemy. Could we persuade ourselves that something false is true? It is easily done if we give in to human reasoning instead of going to the Word of God and proving His instructions without imposing a personal interpretation. The key fact is to let the Bible interpret itself. God speaks to us through His Word, if we let Him.

We can deceive ourselves in two ways:

- Consciously, when we refuse to accept the truth and justify our disobedience, saying “God will understand” or “God won’t mind if I do this. He wants me to be happy.”
- Unconsciously when we sincerely believe something to be true but it is not.

The more we think we know, the more easily we can fall into the trap of self-deception. The more we use human reasoning, our opinions, or our suppositions, the easier it is to deceive ourselves. The more we act or react with our emotions (it feels so true, it must be true), the more readily we can convince ourselves that our view is right thus excusing our actions or lack of due diligence with the scriptures, even those that might prove us wrong.

God inspired the prophet Jeremiah to write, “The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it?” (Jeremiah 17:9). The apostle John explained, “If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us” (1 John 1:8).

Jesus Christ is the way, the truth and the life (John 14:6). We are sanctified by the truth, by Jesus Christ. We are set apart by Him. It is important that we examine ourselves in light of the scriptures, constantly and consistently correcting our course. Is Jesus Christ in us? He should be. Would Jesus Christ have done that? Would He have believed that? These are important questions to consider (2 Corinthians 13:5).

It is our responsibility to learn to rightly divide the Word of Truth, to distinguish between truth and error. This requires a lifelong commitment to grow in the grace and knowledge of Jesus Christ (2 Peter 3:18).

Satan – the originator of deception

Satan is the primary source of deception. As the “prince of the power of the air”, he has deceived the whole world (Ephesians 2:2; Revelation 12:9). By persuading people that something false is true, his intent is to destroy us. We need to be on our guard against him at all times.

Satan’s strategy mixes truth and lies, so what he says sounds plausible but is not all true. This mix raises doubts in our minds to weaken us so we become easy prey. He and his demons know the scriptures well, but they don’t live by them. On the contrary, they reject them wholesale.

One remedy is found in James 4:7. The brother of the Lord was inspired to write, “Therefore submit to God. Resist the devil and he will flee from you”. Submission to God requires meekness and a teachable, repentant attitude so that He can work with us.

Resisting the devil requires tools. In our daily prayers, we can request the full armour of God (Ephesians 6:11-18). If we want to win the battle, we need the right equipment, and God provides it if we ask and do our part by seeking Him and staying close to Him in loving obedience.

The Lord Jesus Christ used that equipment to defeat Satan. When the devil tried to twist the meaning of Unverified acceptance of what we are told without confirming its accuracy in the light of Scripture will leave us open to deception.

certain scriptures to persuade Jesus to put God to the test, our Saviour used the sword of the word of God to vanquish him (Matthew 4:5-7).

Know and practise what the Bible teaches

In the book of Matthew, Jesus Christ gave warnings for our time, so that we might be on our guard (Matthew 24:5-6, 11, 24). So, how can we detect deception?

Experience proves that not all we believe to be true is truth. This may include long-held, cherished beliefs. God’s word is truth, so we need to learn it, to master it, with God’s help and with His Holy Spirit within us.

It is not enough to just believe or accept a teaching. God expects us to prove it so that we are grounded in truth and can really understand what He intends. The apostle Paul wrote, “Test all things; hold fast what is good” (1 Thessalonians 5:21). “Test” means to prove, to examine carefully what we are told, what we read and the facts of a situation, always in the light of the Holy Scriptures. God’s Word is the only standard that counts. If it does not fit with the Scriptures, simply discard it.

Naivety and unverified acceptance of what we are told without confirming its accuracy in the light of Scripture, will leave us open to deception.

So let us:

- Submit to God
- Resist the devil
- Check the facts
- Master the Word of God

The world is deceived, but Christ’s followers must not be. We must strive to live by the Word of God, the truth, not just knowing it but acting upon it.

God's power can help us conquer temptation

Satan's principle tool against us is temptation. Those who have received the gift of the Holy Spirit, God's very power, have a weapon to defeat him.

Temptation may well be the oldest trick in the book. Satan tempted Eve with the forbidden fruit by making it appealing to the eyes, and tempted Jesus to seek His own will and not that of His Father.

One purpose for God gifting His Holy Spirit to His begotten children is to help them resist temptation. It is given to those who seek to obey Him, following baptism and the laying-on-of-hands (Acts 5:32). In addition to being us as children of God, it gives us the means to gain self-control over our wayward thoughts and our human nature and to develop spiritual traits by linking our minds with the mind of Christ (Philippians 2:5). (To study further please request or download our study aid The Power of the Holy Spirit.)

There are three main strategies for employing the power of the Holy Spirit to overcome temptation.

Pray for help

The most basic response for a Christian under duress is to seek God. When we put our focus on Him, we take our mind away from the temptation. If we have received the gift of the Holy Spirit we can ask for help to stir up that Spirit within us so that we rely on our Heavenly Father's power. If we are not yet baptised we can still pray for help.

When we talk to God and allow Him to speak to us as we read His Word, His promises can encourage us. This would include promises such as: "No temptation has overtaken you except such as is common to man; but God is faithful, who will not allow you to be tempted beyond what you are able, but with the temptation will also make the way of escape, that you may be able to bear it" (1 Corinthians 10:13).

We can look on challenging situations as a way of practising God's way and building Christlike character. Every time we resist temptation, we develop self-control, a fruit of the Spirit (Galatians 5:22-23).

When seeking God, we can read about and meditate on faithful examples who also relied upon our Heavenly Father to resist temptation. There's no better example than Jesus, who successfully resisted Satan's temptations by using Scripture. Jesus could have intervened on His own behalf to spare Himself physical discomfort, agony and harm but He knew that it was against God's will. He knew the physical was temporary, and the spiritual is permanent.

Flee from the temptation

A second strategy for dealing with temptation is found in the life of Joseph. Seventeen-year-old Joseph was sold into slavery in Egypt by his jealous older brothers. He subsequently became overseer of Potiphar's household. Joseph was "handsome in form and appearance" and Potiphar's wife propositioned him (Genesis 39:6-10). She was persistent, yet Joseph resisted every attempt using logic and reason. Finally, he had to resort to a different strategy and flee (verse 12).

We sin when we give in to temptation. Joseph had to make a choice every day, which would not have been easy for a young man, virile and full of hormones. A man of honour and virtue could not follow through with natural inclinations because he knew that adultery was a "sin against God" (Genesis 39:9).

How often does temptation overcome us because we allow ourselves to remain in a wrong situation? To defeat temptation, Joseph had to fight his inclination and make a conscious decision to flee from the opportunity! He took himself out of the equation, choosing to remove himself from the environment of temptation.

Years later, Paul would sum this up in a letter to another youth. He advised, "Flee also youthful lusts; but pursue righteousness, faith, love, peace with those who call on the Lord out of a pure heart" (2 Timothy 2:22).

Wherever there is temptation there is a chance of sinning. Rather than having to continually resist the urge to sin, it might be wiser to remove ourselves from the source of the temptation and avoid being drawn into potentially compromising circumstances.

A matter of choice

The previous two strategies focused on reacting to the situation when our emotions are running high. A third strategy is dependent upon having cognitive control over decision-making abilities. With God's power and the spirit of a sound mind we can stop, analyse the situation and weigh the consequences of our actions. God told the Israelites, "I have set before you life and death, blessings and cursings: therefore choose life . . ." (Deuteronomy 30:19).

We also read in the book of James, "But each one is tempted when he is drawn away by his own desires and enticed. Then, when desire has conceived, it gives birth to sin; and sin, when it is full-grown, brings forth death" (James 1:14-15).

As humans, we often justify our choices to fit our desires. Most, if not all, temptations are about fulfilling an immediate desire or providing instant gratification.

Giving in to temptation only results in a temporary pleasure. Yet every time we act in this way, we are weakening our self-control muscle.

When tempted, we have a choice. Either, we give in to the lust of the flesh, instant gratification, and temporary physical pleasure, then suffer the subsequent negative consequences and eventually death. Or, when tempted, we can resist the temptation, delay gratification, act righteously, and exercise the fruit of the Spirit. The latter choice helps us develop spiritual character which leads to the reward of everlasting life.

Temptation is when we are given the option to choose short-term enjoyment at the expense of long-term goals. This three-tier strategy, pray, flee or choose, uses God's gift to us to overcome temptation. When we pray, we can ask for inspiration to make the choice to flee temptation, and then with clarity of a sound mind we can analyse and decide on which path we will walk. When we take the right actions, then we can clearly see that one path leads to destruction and the other leads to everlasting life.

Therefore, we should choose life.

Mark Mirigian

Hope in a hopeless world

In a world that is steadily becoming a more fearful and dangerous place, Christ promised His followers peace of mind.

Fear has engulfed our planet: Fear of Covid-19, fear of job-losses with the economic downturn due to the lockdown; fear of war; fear of famine after locust invasions across several countries from Africa into Asia; flooding in China with a dam that some fear may burst at any moment. There are racial tensions, alliances being made and broken, potential wars over water. All this in addition to the "normal," natural hazards such as drought, hurricanes and earthquakes.

A fearful populace wonders who the next victim will be, or where the next disaster will occur. How they will be able to support themselves and their families is another, as yet unresolved, issue.

Bible-believing Christians may share these concerns but we needn't have the fears. No matter how dark and dismal this world becomes, God has promised He will never forsake His people (Romans 8:28, 38-39; Hebrews 13:5-6).

A peace not available to the world is promised to those who love God. Jesus promised His disciples, "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give to you; not as the world gives do I give to you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid" (John 14:27).

A Christian's hope is to share in Christ's glory at His return: "To them [His saints] God willed to make known what are the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles: which is Christ in you, the hope of glory. Him we preach, warning every man and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus" (Colossians 1:27:28).

A world is coming where the threat of war will be no more (Isaiah 2:4). Earth will provide abundance for all (Amos 9:13). The curse of disease and physical infirmity will be completely banished (Isaiah 35:5-6).

There is hope in a hopeless world for those who heed God's call to repentance and seek a relationship with Him now. To learn more please request or download our Bible study aid The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Q Why do good and law-abiding people suffer with the wicked? Where is God when these evils occur?

Subscriber in Sutton Coldfield

A This present world has a ruler other than God. The apostle Paul brings this out clearly in 2 Corinthians 4:4 where Satan is referred to as “the god of this age.”

When the devil tempted Jesus, he was willing to give Christ “all the kingdoms of the world” if He would worship him (Matthew 4:8-10). Jesus did not correct Satan’s claim that the world was his to give. (To study Satan’s origin please request our booklet Is There Really a Devil?)

The Lord Jesus also instructed His disciples to pray, “Your kingdom come, Your will be done on earth as it is in heaven” (Matthew 6:9). This shows that God’s kingdom on Earth hasn’t yet been established. Of course, Almighty God reserves for himself the ultimate authority over what is allowed and what isn’t in the rule of man under Satan’s influence. The opening chapters of the book of Job show this clearly.

Let the Bible Answer...

What does the Bible say about God’s law?

God’s law is perfect: Psalm 19:7; James 1:25.

It teaches us love for God and our fellow human beings: Matthew 22:35-40; 1 John 5:2-3.

It also reveals what sin is, so we know what to avoid: Romans 3:20, 7:7; 1 John 3:4.

It is to be written on our hearts: Deuteronomy 6:1-6; Psalm 37:31; 40:8; Hebrews 8:10. In this way we can have the mind of Christ: Philippians 2:5.

When Christ returns to rule the world in righteousness in the not-too-distant future the kingdoms of this world will become “the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever!” (Revelation 11:15). At that time Satan will be banished for a thousand years (Revelation 20:1-2).

Without direction from God, human rulership over fellow man will always end in failure. Throughout man’s 6000 year history God has given every empire the opportunity to bring about a utopian society. All have failed.

Many wonder, “Where was God when evil men like Stalin, Hitler and countless others took over nations and governed dictatorially?” We can turn the question around and ask, where was man? All human leaders have the responsibility to rule justly according to the instructions that God gave, as in Deuteronomy 29:29: “The secret things belong to the Lord our God, but those things that are revealed belong to us and to our children forever, that we may do all the things of this law.” Man is reaping the consequences of having rejected the laws of God on how to govern justly.

The prophet Isaiah reminded his people that God’s judgement would come upon them because they had strayed from His laws of social justice (Isaiah 1:16-17). As with the ancient Israelites, so with today’s society. Nothing much has changed, or will change, until God Almighty intervenes in the affairs of this world and sends His Son to the earth to bring about a truly just and equitable society.

Q God’s Sabbath is on a Saturday but most churches keep Sunday. Is it wrong to go to church on a Sunday?

Subscriber in London

A Whether to congregate on Sunday or the Sabbath to worship God is answered in John 4:24, “God is Spirit and those who worship Him must worship in spirit and truth.” Are the doctrines you are being taught in alignment with scripture?

There can be no question that Sunday as a day for collective worship of God originated with the Roman Catholic Church, as those in that denomination admit. See for example The Convert’s Catechism of Catholic Doctrine by Peter Geiermann, page 50, which states, “We [the Catholic Church] observe Sunday instead of Saturday because the Catholic Church transferred the solemnity from Saturday to Sunday.”

Jesus said clearly that “the Son of Man is also Lord of the Sabbath” (Mark 2:27-28). He is not ‘Lord of Sunday’. For more information please request our Bible study aids The Church Jesus Built and Sunset to Sunset: God’s Sabbath Rest.
